The rights under the GDPR are the rights of access, to rectification, restriction, erasure, objection and portability.

- Right of access

You have the right to ask the Immigration Office if they are processing personal data concerning you. If so, you have the right to ask a copy of those data and to obtain information about the purposes of the data processing, the categories of recipients to whom the data have been disclosed, the period for which the data are stored and the data sources (when such information has not been collected from you).

- Right to rectification

The Immigration Office has the obligation to process accurate data and to take the appropriate measures to rectify, if necessary. In relation to this obligation, you have the right to ask and obtain from the Immigration Office the rectification of your personal data if inaccurate.

- Right to restriction

In the following cases, you have the right to request and obtain from the Immigration Office restriction of processing your personal data:

- a) when you challenge the accuracy of your personal data, this being for a period enabling the Immigration Office to verify the data's accuracy; or
- b) when the processing is unlawful and you object to the erasure of your personal data and you request, instead, the restriction of the processing of these data; or
- c) when the Immigration Office no longer needs your personal data for the purposes of the processing, however you still require these data for the establishment, exercise or defence of your legal claims.

Where processing has been restricted, your data, except for their storage, can only be processed with your consent or for the establishment, exercise or defence of legal claims, or for the protection of the rights of another natural or legal person, or on important grounds of public interest for the European Union or one of its Member States.

You have the right to object to the processing of your personal data by the Immigration Office, at any time and for reasons relating to your particular situation. However, the Immigration Office may oppose this if there are compelling legitimate grounds for the processing which override your interests, rights and freedoms or that are related to the establishment, exercise or defence of legal claims.

- Right to portability

Since processing of your personal data by the Immigration Office does not rely on your consent or on the performance of a contract, the right to portability is not to be applicable. Therefore, you are not entitled to obtain from the Immigration Office your personal data in a structured, commonly used and machine-readable format to be transferred to another controller.
